

'I wish I hadn't stopped taking piano lessons when I was a child' - sound familiar? As a piano tutor, if I had £5 for every time I'd heard someone say that, I'd be living on a private island instead of writing this blog!

It's never too late to start, and as an adult, although one finds learning new things more of a challenge than when one is younger, it really is possible to achieve great results and even impress your children if they are learning the piano too!

Learning the piano as an adult can be both rewarding as well as challenging and is a great way to get away from the stresses of work giving your mind something entirely different to think about.
